Upgraded Wifi Router but Slower 2.4 Ghz speed - [Solved]
2020/06/27

I just upgraded from a TP-LINK TL-WDR3600 (because it kept losing signal) to a TP-Link Archer AC1200. Everything about the modem works fine, and the download speeds on the 5.0 Ghz is slightly higher from the original modem (it went from an average of 85 Mb/s to 110Mb/s). However, the 2.4 Ghz frequency has decreased in bandwidth with the new modem (from an average of 79Mb/s down to 54 Mb/s). I logged into the original router and went through the settings and compared them to the new router and they seem to be the same as far as I can tell. Any help would be appreciated. As a side note this is the second new router I have purchased, the first one was a TP-Link N300 (TC-W7960) which I returned because of the slower speeds, I simply thought that the router was slower than my original and returned it. Then I bought the TP-Link Archer AC1200 and I am experiencing the same problem.
